

Member Brings Banners From Other U.S. Clubs

Rotarian Lace Blue-McLean, recognized this year by the county Economic Development Council as an outstanding community member for her work to save Three Sisters Springs, brought back banners from Rotary clubs she visited on a recent vacation with husband Bob.

She is pictured here with Rotary Club of Inverness president Charlie Richer, presenting banners from the Rotary Club of Downtown Savannah, GA, the Rotary Club of Peabody, MA and the Rotary Club of Downtown Philadelphia, PA.

Rotary club members observe the tradition of exchanging banners when visiting other clubs. The Rotary Club of Inverness displays banners it has received to remind members that they are part of a global organization where all members subscribe to the motto "Service Above Self". They are from clubs as far away as the Philippines and Japan to as close as Tarpon Springs and Brooksville.

The Rotary Club of Inverness is among the 33,000 Rotary clubs in 200 countries, with 1.2 million members, that are part of Rotary International, the first established and largest service club in the world.
