

District Gov. Russ Miller shares Rotary passion

July 29, 2008

If you did not leave last week's meeting filled with excitement about the direction that our District is heading and with enthusiasm for the good works of Rotary around the world, you should check to see if you have a pulse.

District Gov. Russ Miller talked excitedly about the efforts of RI in tackling the service organization's main objectives: Improving water quality, literacy and to fight hunger around the world. And, of course, to continue with our extraordinary Polio-Plus initiative.

Russ also encouraged all of us to share the passion with others, to tell people you know all about Rotary. He spoke earlier in the day with the board and officers of our club about our specific agenda and applauded our efforts.

Russ was especially interested in our Habitat for Humanity connections and explained Project Building Hope, District 6950's signature program this year, which aims to build 12 homes this year to be given to mothers on Mother's Day. We look forward to a terrific year!
